

Dallas Arboretum starts year with cooking classes, tastings

January 2, 2018

Kim Pierce

A Tasteful Place at the Dallas Arboretum has it going on in the new year, celebrating what's growing in its 3 1/2-acre vegetable, herb and fruit garden right now, such as bok choy, radishes, cilantro and kale.

For January, this means you can enjoy demonstrations and tastings, plus local artisans presenting their products.

Sprinkled throughout the month are tasting events and product demos from folks such as chef Ryan Olmos of CiboDivino, chef Joanne Bondy of Stocks & Bondy, and chocolatier Zach Townsend of Pure Chocolate. All events are included in general garden admission.