

Where To Eat In Dallas This Weekend

November 17, 2017

Rachel Pinn

Dying for dining inspiration? The weekend is just a few short hours away, and if you still need a place to eat brunch, lunch, or dinner this weekend, Eater's got your back.

As part of this brand new series, Eater editors and contributors will choose a group of brand new spots and reliable standbys every Friday that will provide a guide to everything you need to know about eating and drinking this weekend.

Even if you're not able to hit all of the spots on Saturday and Sunday, add these five Dallas restaurants and food-focused events to this weekend's bucket list. TGIF, y'all.

To join in the annual celebration of Beaujolais Nouveau wine: CiboDivino Marketplace

Saturday from noon to 5:00 p.m., Sylvan Thirty will become very, very French as chef Daniele Puleo and Ryan Olmos from CiboDivino and chef Julien Eelsen of Whisk Crepes Café join together to whip up perfectly paired French bites to enjoy with glasses of Beaujolais Nouveau and live music and entertainment.